A 91 page booklet, specifically designed for Military Working Dog Instructors. Written in response to a request to provide comprehensive theoretical knowledge for trainees attending the Military Working Dog Instructor School. Content is divided into four chapters. Chapter one deals with professional commitments, duties and relationships. Chapter two stresses the importance of health and safety in the military working dog training environment. Chapter three sets out educational targets and provides relevant guidance, giving specific information on the Military Working Dog training fields of: habituation, socialization, obedience, agility, wind scenting, bite work, night patrol, decoy/agitator and scent search in buildings. Chapter four provides all the necessary forms required for data and progress monitoring of training. The final pages provide explanations and definitions for the particular terminology used in Military Dog Training.
